A friend, one day in a bookstore, was accosted by a stranger, who took up a volume of Irving a stranger, who took up a volume or trying a works and said: "A great author, sir, a very great author! I consider him national property, and being near Sunnyside lately, I called to get my dicidend."

ation. It was not "brilliant" or "striking," or any other common-place adject ive, but perfectly natural, original and leasant. The first impression produced by the individual was not pleasant. You would have said that a plain, rather dull. farmer stood before you, with no ideas b youd the price of wheat, and no ambitio reater than to raise the most gigantic ampkins. But this theory of the man on disappeared from the mind. It was vidently "a scholar, and a ripe one," who was walking beside you with his pleasant roice his sweet smile, his queer little figure, the very sight of which put you in good humor. And this scholar, as you soon found, had not studied human nature in books only, but in men. From his chance allusions—and no man talked less for effect, or so little thought of "making an impression"—you discovered that he had not only seen many countries, but had counce allusions—and no man talked less for effect, or so little thought of "making an impression"—you discovered that he had not only seen many countries, but had known personally some of the most celebrated men of modern times. Scott, Leslie the painter, Louis Napoleon, the Empress Eugenio—some allusion brought up these personages; and Irving strolled on amid his flowers, talking of them with the simplest and quietest humor, and from time to time a touch of an armony to the service of the servi simplest and quietest humor, and from time to time a touch of feeling for all the ORGANIZED 1850. CHARTER PERPETUAL, world like his books. His talk was an April day-drifting clouds and sunshine, but the sunshine predominant. His short, shy laugh was the perfection of quiet enjoyment; and there was a charm in the sad, memorial tones of his voice as he spoke of Scott and others, which can not easily be described. He laughed as he told of the painter, Leslie, I think, who went to Abbotsford to paint Scott's portrait, and found the house full of company. The company having departed, Leslie thought, "Now for my picture;" but Scott, starting up from the breakfast table, exclaimed, "Now for a hare!" the remainder of the day being spent in hunting, though at this time the printers were waiting for "copy" of one of the greatest novels. Irving's account of Scott was delightful, and his anecdotes General Fire, Marine & Ins. Ag't. of Leslie, then just dead, I believe, full of office. Oviati's Exchange, fost Superior Street, interest. They had traveled to Stratford together, he said, and he wanted Leslie to paint "Shakspeare before Sir Thomas Lucy;" but the great artist did not get the inspiration, and never made the picture. Speaking of the present Emperor of the French, Irving said : "Yes, he is a remarkable man. I knew him when he was in America, and he used day, and sat just where you do now, (to me; we were at dinner.) He was grave and silent, scarcely opening his lips while here; but a young French Count who acempanied him was more agreeable, and ich greater favorite with the girls."

spoke of the Empress Eugenie.

"I knew her very well in Spain, when she was little Eugeine de Montijo, daugh-ter of the Count de Teba. She was a fine buxom girl, a beautiful figure; and at the balls dressed as a mosquetaire—female. I have often had her on my knee, and now to think she is an empress! Old Calderon (de la Barca, Spanish minister) said to me at Washington when I was there: "Good heavens! Irving, just to think! Little Eu-genie Montije empress of France—hum! hum! hum!

It was evident that he had mingled familiarly with the most cultivated men and women of Europe and America; and that he was in the best sense of the word a man of the or breeding can supply—a kindliness, sim-plicity, and genial sweetness of manner, which were inexpressibly delightful. ALWAYS SUCCESSFUL AS A PREVENTATIVE.

It is now over thirty years since the above cultivated Pills were first discovered by Dr. DUPCNCO of Paris, during which time they have been extensively and successfully used in most of the public institutions, as well as in private practice, of both lemispheres, with unparalleled success in every case, and it is only at the "urgent request" of the thousands of Ladius whe have used them, that he is induced to make the Pills public for the alleviation of those suffering from any Irregularities whatever, as well as to prevent an increase of family, where health will not parmit it. Yamakes peculiarly situated, or those supporting themselves so, are cautioned against using these Pills while in that condition, as the proprietor assumes no responsibilities after the above admonition, although their mildness would prevent any mischief to health, otherwise the Fills are recommended.

Price $1.00 per Box. Six Boxes $5.00.

Sold in Cleveland by Messers. BENTON & DUN-HAM and STRONG & ARMSTRONG, who will supply Dealers, and send the Pills confidentially by small on receipt of $1.00, or address.
